Keep your fingers crossed that May will bring warm, drying days. With baseball and softball season on top of us and such a limited amount of time and games, we need our field to dry up!

I will be starting the Kindergarten thru Grade 4 class lists this month. I will meet with teachers to gather information on their students, including their academic levels and behavioral needs. This information will then be used to create the lists, making sure that students are evenly distributed among teachers for a balanced classroom. Teachers will then have the opportunity to review these lists for accuracy during common planning time, suggesting any necessary revisions.

May brings us the opportunity for a half day and full day of professional development. I am meeting with both the inservice committee and the math committee tomorrow morning to begin the development of agendas for these days. We will be committing one day to math as Amanda, our math consultant, will be joining us. Professional development with your teachers is always an amazing day of growth. It is exciting as a principal to walk around the building and see such a dedicated group of professionals working together on what they need to grow as individuals.

Enjoy the upcoming Spring weather!
